

Greenway Running Notes

Little Sugar Creek Greenway - October 2025

Casual mileage on the Little Sugar Creek Greenway, three mornings a week before the humidity sets in.

The routine

Runs land Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday at 6:30 in the morning. Distance runs two to three miles. The early start beats the Charlotte heat, and the mild anxiety eases on the running mornings, so the time is protected like any other commitment.

The route

- Enter the greenway near Dilworth and head north toward Uptown.
- The two mile turnaround sits just past the footbridge.
- The three mile loop continues to Freedom Park and back.
- A water fountain sits near the midpoint, with shade most of the way.

October log

A steady month, easing back on Mondays after the weekend long run.

Date	Day	Miles	Average pace
October 1, 2025	Wednesday	3.0	9:53
October 4, 2025	Saturday	3.1	9:48
October 6, 2025	Monday	2.4	9:38
October 8, 2025	Wednesday	2.8	9:43
October 11, 2025	Saturday	3.0	9:36
October 13, 2025	Monday	2.2	9:36

Total for the stretch: 16.5 miles across six runs, averaging about 9:42 per mile.

Weekly summary

Week	Runs	Miles	Best pace
Week of October 1	2	6.1	9:48
Week of October 6	3	8.2	9:36
Week of October 13	1	2.2	9:36

Conditions and gear

The greenway holds shade for most of the route, which keeps the summer mornings runnable. A quick weather check before heading out decides between the long loop and the short turnaround. Nothing fancy on the gear front, just a reliable pair of shoes rotated through the season and a light layer for the cooler mornings.

- Check the forecast the night before; storms move the run to the next dry morning.
- Rotate two pairs of shoes so neither breaks down mid season.
- Carry water on the three mile loop once the heat sets in.

Goals and notes

- A goal of 30 miles across the month keeps the rhythm honest without chasing speed.
- The Saturday run pairs with coffee with Megan right after.
- Lighter on nights before a big court hearing, so the morning run helps clear the head.
- Build back slowly after any week that drops below two runs.

Three mornings a week, before the humidity. The miles are small and the habit is the point.