

Performance Notes

A seasonal newsletter from Peak Performance PT, Winter 2026

2155 Monroe Drive NE, Suite 120, Atlanta, GA 30324 | (404) 555-0150 | www.peakperformancept.com

A Note from the Owner

Winter is build season around here. We are deep into the new performance lab and the energy in the clinic has been great. Thank you for trusting us with your training and your recovery. Here is what is coming and a few things worth knowing.

The Performance Lab Opens This Fall

Construction is underway on a dedicated testing space. When it opens this October it will house force plates, hamstring testing, and an anti gravity treadmill. That means we can put real numbers behind return to sport decisions and performance goals, rather than relying on feel alone. Watch for an open house invitation in the fall.

Return to Sport, Done Right

Coming back from a knee or ankle injury is not about a date on the calendar. It is about hitting the strength and movement targets that tell us the tissue and the athlete are ready. If you or your athlete is rehabbing an injury, ask us about objective testing before the return to play.

Staff Spotlight

Marcus Webb joined the team last year from the world of college athletics and leads our concussion protocols. If you have a young athlete in a contact sport, Marcus is the person to talk to about a baseline and a smart return plan.

Get in Touch

Call the front desk or book online. New athletes can request a consult through the website. We look forward to seeing you in the gym.