This savings account holds the household reserve. Most of the balance came from Marlene's life insurance, which paid off the house and the remaining medical bills and left a cushion that Gary has been careful to protect. The account earns modest interest and receives a steady monthly transfer from checking.

About This Reserve

The reserve sits at roughly thirty four thousand dollars and is not part of the monthly spending plan. It is there for a furnace that gives out in January, a roof that needs work, or a year when the truck finally asks for more than a battery. Gary draws on it rarely and replaces what he uses.

A small amount is set aside each month for the grandchildren, kept separate from the reserve so that birthday and college gifts never reduce the safety net. The house, the truck, and every medical bill are fully paid, so the savings carry no competing debt.

Statements are reviewed with Karen, who helps Gary keep the records straight during her monthly visits.
