Grace is the volunteer head coach of the Westcott Strikers, a U15 girls' field hockey team, a role she has held alongside her legal work. She played the sport through college as a midfielder and team captain, and coaching is one of the few commitments she protects from the demands of the caseload.

Coaching Notes

The squad reached the semifinals last season and returns most of its players. The plan builds from conditioning and fundamentals in the cold months toward match play and tactics as the season opens. Grace handles strategy while the assistant coach manages the emotional side and works well with the younger players.

Coaching costs about fifty dollars a month for supplies and equipment upkeep, paid out of pocket. The aim this year is a championship run, and the team has the experience to make it realistic.
