

Bayview Community College
Department of History and Public Policy

A Public Lecture

The Civilian Conservation Corps and the Roots of Federal Environmental Stewardship

A guest lecture by Juan Hernandez

Retired senior policy analyst, United States Department of the Interior

Thursday, October 22, 2026 - 1:00 PM to 2:30 PM

Humanities Hall, Room 114

101 College Parkway, Arnold, MD 21012

Free and open to the public. No registration required.

About the talk

Drawing on a thirty five year career in environmental regulation and land management, the speaker traces how the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930s shaped public land policy that still guides federal stewardship today. The talk covers the conservation projects of the Corps, the agencies that grew from them, and the lessons that carry into present climate policy. A question period follows.

About the speaker

Juan Hernandez spent his career as a senior policy analyst at the Department of the Interior, where he worked on environmental regulation and land management. He holds a bachelor of arts in political science and a master of public administration. Now retired in Annapolis, he tutors adult learners, lectures occasionally on environmental policy, and writes on conservation for the local press.

Program

1:00 PM Welcome and introduction

1:10 PM The problem in 1933 and the creation of the Corps

1:40 PM What the Corps built, and the institutions it left behind

2:10 PM From the 1930s to present climate policy

2:20 PM Questions from the audience

Parking is available in Lot C. The hall is accessible. For questions contact the Department of History and Public Policy at 410-555-0921.