

Reading List - WWII And American Industrial History

Personal reading log. Slow and steady, mostly on the the e-reader after the recovery hour or on a quiet shift break. Updated October 2026.

Currently Reading

- The Iron Meridian by David Calloway - industrial history, about a third in. Good on the factory-floor detail.

Up Next

- A logistics-focused account of the wartime production effort.
- A narrative history of the home-front industrial cities.
- A single-campaign deep dive to break up the heavier industrial reads.

Finished This Year

- A naval history I picked up last winter, finished early 2026.
- A biography of an industrialist - decent, a bit dry in the middle.

Notes

Keep the list in step with the the reading-list app shelf. Ed gave me the interest along with the vinyl; mention a book to him on the Sunday call now and then.
