Course description

This course builds practical English for adult learners at the low-intermediate level. The focus is life-skills communication: medical appointments, job applications, school enrollment, banking, and civic participation. Students practice listening, speaking, reading, and writing through real tasks they meet in daily life in the Washington metro area. The roster and attendance are tracked in the workbook coded X04.

Learning outcomes

- Communicate needs clearly in common appointments and services.
- Complete routine forms and applications with confidence.
- Read and summarize short practical texts and notices.
- Write short structured messages, including email to a school or employer.
- Build vocabulary for health, work, and community settings.

Policies

- Attendance matters; please message the instructor if you must miss a class.
- Late tasks are accepted within one week with a brief note.
- Materials are posted to the class space; bring a notebook and a pen.
- Respect and support among classmates is expected at all times.

Support

Free tutoring is available through the campus learning center. The instructor sends appointment reminders by text to students who do not use email. Students who need a medical or work note for class can ask; the instructor will coordinate within program rules. This syllabus may be updated; changes will be announced in class.

Prepared by Ian Woodward, ESOL Adjunct Instructor, Montgomery College.

Materials and technology

Most materials are provided in class or posted to the class space. Students who do not use email receive appointment and assignment reminders by text. The list below covers what learners should have on hand.

- A notebook and pen for in-class practice.
- A folder to keep handouts and returned work.
- Access to a phone or computer for the class space, if possible.
- A small bilingual dictionary, optional but helpful.

Sample task: the medical appointment

Step	Practice
Make the call	Greet, give name and reason
At check-in	Provide date of birth and insurance
With the provider	Describe the problem and timeline
Instructions	Repeat back the plan to confirm
Follow-up	Schedule the next visit

This task connects directly to daily life and to the kind of communication adult learners use most. The instructor adapts examples to the experiences students bring to class.
