

Personal Monthly Budget - Summary

Personal finances | Kept separate from the business books

A plain look at where the personal money goes each month. The cottage is part of the waterfront lease the business carries, so there is no separate rent line here. The goal is to hold the line and start an emergency fund.

Monthly outflow

Category	Amount
Truck payment (2020 F-150)	$380
Child support (court-ordered)	$600
Health insurance (ACA Bronze)	$295
Auto and boat insurance	$210
Groceries	$350
Child expenses (Nathan visits)	$200
Fuel / gas	$250
Phone and internet	$115
Subscriptions	$30
Total	$2,430

Goals on the board

- Build a personal emergency fund toward $10,000. Currently around $4,200 in the credit union.
- Open a retirement account this year - there is nothing set aside yet, and that is the thing that keeps me up.
- Review the support order against current income (see the separate research notes).
- Pay down the truck note; roughly $9,500 left on the 2020 F-150.

Notes

The business salary is intentionally low while revenue gets reinvested toward break-even. That is a choice, not a surprise, but it means the personal side has no slack. Any month with a Nathan visit runs a couple hundred higher and that is money well spent. The fix is on the revenue side of the business, not by squeezing this sheet further.

Personal finance summary. Confidential. Not financial advice; a budget, not a plan.