Itinerary

Date	Camping zone	Activity
August 15, 2025	Lower Saddle	Approach and camp
August 16, 2025	Day climb, exit	Upper Exum Ridge, descend Owen Spalding

This permit authorizes overnight backcountry camping only in the designated zone listed above and only for the dates shown. The party climbs the Grand Teton by the Upper Exum Ridge and descends the Owen Spalding route. The holder is an experienced mountaineer climbing with one partner and carrying a satellite messenger for the trip.

Conditions of permit

- Camp only in the designated zone listed above on the night shown.
- Pack out all waste and use approved human waste systems on the upper mountain.
- No campfires anywhere in the backcountry.
- A bear resistant canister is required for all food and scented items.
- The permit must be carried and shown to a ranger on request.

Mountain safety and conditions

Weather on the upper mountain changes quickly. Afternoon thunderstorms are common in August and the summit ridge is exposed. Parties should start early, watch the sky, and be willing to turn around. Rockfall is a hazard on the standard routes, so helmets are strongly recommended.

Topic	Guidance
Water	Treat or filter all backcountry water sources
Wildlife	Store food in the canister, keep a clean camp, no scented products
Snow and ice	Verify current conditions on the Owen Spalding rappels
Group spacing	Keep the party together on the approach and descent

Emergency information

In an emergency, contact Teton Interagency Dispatch or use the satellite messenger to request help. Provide your permit number, party size, location, and the nature of the emergency. Self rescue is the expectation whenever it can be done safely.

Leave no trace

- Plan ahead and prepare for the conditions and regulations of the area.
- Travel and camp on durable surfaces such as rock, snow, and established sites.
- Dispose of waste properly and carry out everything you carry in.
- Leave what you find, including rocks, plants, and historic features of the park.
- Respect wildlife and other visitors and keep noise down at camp.

Issued at the Jenny Lake Ranger Station. This permit is not transferable. Have a safe climb and leave no trace.
