

Avalanche Level 1 Field Course

Teton Summit Resort Avalanche Education, in partnership with the resort

Lead instructor: Jeff Peterson, Avalanche Level 3, cert A3-WY-1188

Course fee	$375 per student
Maximum students	15
Meeting point	Teton Pass winter lot, 7:30 AM both days
Format	Two day field intensive
Prerequisite	None, recreational backcountry interest

Course overview

A two day field intensive that gives recreational backcountry travelers the tools to recognize avalanche terrain, understand the snowpack, plan a tour, and make safer decisions in a group. Classroom theory is kept short. Most of the time is spent outside in real terrain, working with rescue gear and reading the snow under the guidance of a working avalanche forecaster.

Day one

Time	Topic
7:30 AM	Trailhead beacon check and gear review
8:00 AM	Avalanche formation and terrain recognition
10:00 AM	Trip planning and the daily advisory
12:00 PM	Companion rescue, beacon, probe, shovel
2:30 PM	Single and multiple burial practice
4:00 PM	Debrief and homework

Day two

Time	Topic
7:30 AM	Weather and snowpack briefing
8:30 AM	Snowpack tests, hand pit to compression test
11:00 AM	Tour with terrain and decision making
2:30 PM	Group debrief and next steps
3:30 PM	Certificates and wrap

Required gear

Transceiver, probe, and shovel are required. Rentals are available on request when you register. Bring a touring setup or splitboard, layers for full winter conditions, plenty of food, and water. No scented products, we travel in wildlife country and keep a low profile on the land.

Category	Items
Avalanche safety	Transceiver, probe at least 240 cm, metal blade shovel
Travel	Skis or splitboard with skins, boots, poles
Clothing	Hardshell, insulated layer, gloves, hat, eye protection
Sustenance	Thermos, water, high calorie food for a full day

Policies and what to expect

- Arrive on time for the trailhead beacon check, it is the first lesson of the day.
- Courses run in most weather, we adjust terrain to keep the day safe and useful.
- Refunds follow the published policy, a waitlist fills any opened spot.
- Bring an open mind, good decisions in avalanche terrain are humble decisions.

About the instructor

Jeff Peterson is a senior ski patroller and one of three Avalanche Level 3 forecasters at the resort. He co-authors the daily hazard advisory, handles control work, and has taught these public courses for several seasons. His goal for the weekend is simple, that every student leaves able to plan a safer tour and rescue a partner without hesitation.

To register, reserve a spot through the course site. Spots are limited to fifteen students so the group stays small enough for real coaching in the field.
