

Wind River Meteorological Society

Autumn Meeting and Talk

You are invited to the autumn gathering of the Wind River Meteorological Society.

Program

Featured talk: Reading the High Plains Sky, Forty Years of Backyard Observation.

Presented by Charles McKay, contributor station KWYCODY0142, near Cody.

Details

- Date: Saturday, October 24, 2026
- Time: 1:00 in the afternoon
- Location: community room, Cody
- Open to members and the public, no charge
- Coffee provided, bring your own observations to share

The talk will cover practical forecasting from clouds, wind shift, and barometric pressure, long term precipitation and temperature trends for the basin, and how a home station feeds the wider observing network. Question and discussion to follow.

For directions or to register interest, contact the society through the usual channel. We look forward to seeing you there.
